Sermon Given Yesterday.

The commencement exercises at the college began yesterday with the baccalaureate sermon by Dr. Silas Evans, president of Ripon College, Ripon, Wis. The address was heard by a large audience.

The baccalaureate speaker pictured Abraham of Biblical times in a modern setting, drawing lessons from the Old Testament story and applying them to the present. Among significant statements by Dr. Evans were these:

"The ten commandments can break any man, but no man can break the ten commandments." "Laws are not given to be debated. They are given to be obeyed."

"The universe was made for truth and we can't get anything out of it by lying. We are playing fast and loose with out own intellect when we allow things to be reported wrong. We worship a God of truth and it is He that runs the world with truth."

Dr. Evans said there was much lying in the press, pulpit and platform, because "we are afraid of the consequences." He severely criticised Sinclair Lewis for his book "Elmer Gantry," declaring the author "crazy as a bat in the matter of truth."

Respect for Parents.

Respect for parents was urged by the baccalaureate speaker. "You may often have heard it said," he added, "'I can't wait until I get away from my mother's apron strings.' A mother's apron string is the dearest thing in the world."

He compared the types of persons who get homesick and those who never do. "It is the little man, who puffs on a cigarette, who never cares for home. The soldiers during the war were able to brave everything but thoughts of home."

Dr. Evans reminded the college graduates that the time is at hand for a reckoning among nations in outlawing war and living peaceably among themselves. It will be a difficult thing to outlaw war for one of the hardest problems in the world is to have a neighbor and to be one, he stated.

Ideals Formed Early.

The ideals and visions of youth are formed between the ages of 16 and 25 years, it was said by the speaker, who added that a mind filled with wrong kind of thoughts in that period has little chance of succeeding.

"God helps the man who helps himself," the graduates were reminded. "No man can say the world owes him a living. We owe the world a living. God made the world and the men in it must work."

Oklahoma Farm Boy Wins Bunion Derby

New York, May 28.—Andy Payne, Oklahoma farm boy, who won C. C. Pyle's trans-continental foot race, left Curtiss Field for Washington today in a plane piloted by Charles Parker. At the capital Payne will be presented to President Coolidge.

Despite the $25,000 which he will get as the winner of the race, Payne was in a surly mood.

Floyd Johnson, Near Skidmore, Arrested

Officers Charge Farmer With Possessing of Liquor Following Finding of Jug.

Floyd A. Johnson, a farmer living southwest of Skidmore, was arrested late Saturday night on a charge of possession of liquor. Johnson gave bail yesterday. The arrest was made by Sheriff Lowell B. Campbell, Lloyd Heifner and Clyde Barrett.

A gallon jug of what was said to have been corn liquor was found by the officers in the lane leading to Johnson's farm. The lane was being watched by Johnson at the time the officers appeared on the scene.

TO RUN FOR PROSECUTOR

PAUL R. JONES FILES FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATION.

ASSURES A CONTEST

Former State Teachers College Coach Seeks County Office.—Two Democratic Candidates.

A contest for prosecuting attorney at the November elections was assured today when Paul R. ("Pete") Jones, of the law firm of Sigler and Jones, filed his declaration as a candidate for the Republican nomination with Fred Wright, county clerk.

Mr. Jones was graduated from the law school of the University of Kansas in 1922, and was admitted to the Kansas bar the same year. He practiced law in Morris county for two years after his graduation, when he came to Maryville and joined the athletic department of the Northwest Missouri State Teachers College.

He resigned his position as coach in the summer of 1927, when he was admitted to the Nodaway county bar, and recently became associated with Phares O. Sigler, formerly of the firm of Shinabargar, Blagg and Sigler. Mr. Jones is married and has two children. He is 29 years of age. Mr. Jones made a short statement today, saying:

"Any statement made by a candidate for public office contains certain rubber-stamped characteristics that are meaningless, due to the fact that regardless of the candidate's idea of whom the voters should select, they, as in the past, will continue to exercise their own good judgment. Therefore, I simply wish to state that I am a candidate on the Republican ticket for the office of prosecuting attorney in Nodaway county."

Mr. Jones is the only Republican who has filed for prosecutor. On the Democratic side, two attorneys have filed, Ellis G. Cook and Virgil Rathbun.

100 Present Yesterday.

About one hundred members of the American Legion and Auxiliary, the V. F. W., and Auxiliary, the G. A. R., W. R. C., Spanish War Veterans and Boy Scouts were present yesterday morning at the Memorial services at the First Baptist Church.

The Rev. Guy L. Prather spoke on "The Fight for Right," taking as his scripture reference, Paul's words, at the close of a long, hard, useful life: "I have fought a good fight."

"The battlefield," the minister declared, "is but a symbol of the ceaseless moral and spiritual struggle within the heart and among men.

"Evil forces are well-organized, are seductive, are dark and threatening. They are often entrenched in high places and protected by legal and social barriers, or business methods, or religious claims. So it was with the liquor traffic and slavery.

"No heart is free. It often assumes tragic proportions where least expected. It often parades under the guise of patriotism, or even religion. In every kind of circle we often see a shameful betrayal of confidence, a denial of most sacred obligations, and hindrance to every good cause.

"Paul advises 'the whole armor of God' for our protection and conquest. We must have God's wisdom and strength. One weak point may mean defeat. Achilles received his death wound in the one weak point. Wolfe's soldiers toiled through the night up an unguarded path to the plains of Abraham and defeated Montcalm. A careless habit, a cultivated slight, a neglected spiritual exercise may mean defeat.

"We are unsafe as long as evil surrounds us. Diphtheria, thieves, immoral wretches, and other turbulent nations—all make life unsafe for us."

The weapons of our warfare in spiritual and moral matters, the Reverend Mr. Prather said, are "truth, faith, prayer, and God's Word of Truth."

The "good soldier of Jesus Christ," he said, must learn to "endure hardship," and to "give undivided attention to the Captain of his Salvation."

The Rev. D. H. Howerton of St. Joseph, district evangelist was present and gave a ten-minute report of the Southern Baptist Convention which recently met at Chattanooga, Tenn.

The choir gave the Hallelujah Chorus.

Union—Work on the new pavilion at the city park here, being erected at a cost of $5,000, is nearing completion.

COOLIDGE HAS FARM RELIEF PLAN OF OWN

President May Submit Program, Similar to That of Jardine's, Before Congress Closes.

Washington, May 28.—Reports that President Coolidge might submit a farm relief program to Congress today or tomorrow were current at the White House today.

The President is known to have a plan of his own, thought to be similar to the plan advocated some time ago by Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, but farm leaders have advised him there is inadequate time for action this session.

With no definite time set for adjournment of Congress, however, there is the likelihood the President might put the issue squarely before Congress.

URGES SOUTH BE LET ALONE

ITS PROBLEMS MUST BE SOLVED THERE, SAYS LAKIN.

DEFENDS SEGREGATION

Negroes Should Have Own World, Says Minister, With Many of Them Among Audience.

A MINISTER'S VIEWS ON THE SOUTH AND THE NEGRO

Segregation in the South is the best peace measure.

The negro's world is restricted but reserved. The white man's world is restricted, and often not reserved.

Not favors, but a chance, is all the real man wants.

Conditions in the South are not conductive to honesty and truthfulness on the part of the negro.

Punishment in Dixie is not a deterrent to crime.

The white population of the South is not hostile to the things that make for the negro's educational and spiritual life. The southern white man may be mistaken but I am going to give him credit for being honest and sincere and charitable.

Millions Spent Uselessly.

It's time beyond question that we stop sinning against the negro.

The churches are spending millions on negro education and in nine cases out of ten they are doing nothing, or practically so.

White teachers are agents of discord. The good they do is more than offset by the harm that results. Place the negro over the negro school, and its efficiency will be doubled.

The negro must be taught to have pride in his own race.

How to help "correct things" in the South?

Just keep still. Say nothing.

This is the advice of the Rev. L. E. Lakin, pastor ad interim of the First Christian church, who gave an address last night on "The Southern South and the Southern Negro" before a large audience that included most of Maryville's negro population.

The lecture followed songs by the Sweet Singers of Israel, the choir of the A. M. E. church, of which the Rev. A. J. Bell is pastor. A section of seats was reserved for members of that church and others of Maryville's colored residents. The rest of the main floor of the church auditorium and a large part of the balcony were filled with interested white listeners.

In "Black Belt" Nine Years.

The Reverend Mr. Lakin explained that it was only by virtue of nine years residence in the Mississippi "Black Belt" that he felt qualified to speak on the negro problem of the South.

"The first thing," he said, "that strikes the traveler as he journeys into the South, is that the negro hunts his coach, and the white man sticks to his and neither is allowed to trespass.

"Separate schools and churches are maintained for whites and colored peo-

Bandits Reported Near Basehor, Kan.

Posses Take Up Search With Renewed Vigor as Two Officers Follow New Clue.

Leavenworth, Kan., May 28.—Two deputy sheriffs left here today in search of the Lamar, Colo., bank bandits, who were reported camping on a stream near Basheor, Kan., Leavenworth county.

Under-Sheriff T. A. Hand and a deputy, Bentley Clark, were the officers who took up the new search. They were armed with a machine gun and an automatic shotgun.

Reports from Oakley, Kan., meanwhile, indicated that the bandits still may be in that district.

Posses in that section took up the search with renewed vigor when a bed springs and mattresses were found near Elkader.

WON'T LET THEM QUIT

DAWES' VOTE KEEPS CONGRESS IN SESSION.

BREAKS A SENATE TIE

Vice-President's Surprising Action Seen as New Rebuke to Rules Permitting Filibustering.

Negotiations Collapse.

Washington, May 28.—Peace negotiations of Republican leaders seeking adjournment of Congress tomorrow collapsed late today and the Senate continued deadlocked in a filibuster over the Boulder canyon dam bill.

Washington, May 28.—Vice-President Charles G. Dawes today broke a tie Senate vote on the House resolution to adjourn Congress tomorrow and thereby defeated the resolution.

Dawes' vote killed, temporarily at least, the plan of Republican leaders to force adjournment tomorrow.

It had been thought the resolution would be adopted easily after the Senate had voted down two amendments by Senator Hiram Johnson which would have kept the Senate in session until June 2 or June 5.

Had Conceded Defeat.

Johnson had admitted that his Boulder dam bill was beaten for this session after the Senate had declined to go with him on his move for a June 2 or 5 adjournment.

When the tie vote of 40 to 40 was reached, Dawes announced dramatically:

"The vote being tied, the chair votes no."

The galleries burst into applause.

Senator Curtis, Republican floor leader, immediately called his leaders in conference to ascertain what could be done. Unless some agreement could be reached, the Senate faced the possibility of remaining in session indefinitely.

House Must Stay, Too.

And as long as the Senate is in session, the House must remain with it.

The scene was dramatic. When the Senate met, Curtis rallied his slender majority and beat down Johnson's proposal to adjourn June 5. The vote was 39 to 41. Then he succeeded in defeating the second Johnson proposal, 38 to 42.

Johnson began maneuvering to save his Boulder dam bill so it would be the unfinished business at the session beginning next December. He consented to lay his bill aside until one minute before 5 p. m., tomorrow. Senator Bruce, Democrat, Maryland, objected. When Johnson then asked unanimous consent to make his bill the order of business for the first Monday of next December, Senator Ashurst, Democrat, Arizona, leader of the anti-dam filibusters, objected.

Defeat Unexpected.

"Oh, well, let's put through the adjournment resolution first," said Curtis when it seemed as if Johnson was going to have trouble even saving his bill for next session.

"All right," said Johnson, resigned to defeat.

But when the roll was called, two of Curtis' followers bolted. The clerk found the tie and then Dawes made his unexpected thrust for the opposition.

Dawes long had been fighting the rules of the Senate which permit filibuster. In his inaugural speech March 4, 1924, he vehemently urged the Senate to change its rules so it could conduct business in an orderly manner.

G. O. P. Leaders Surprised.

He has sat back openly amused at the filibuster against the Boulder dam bill and the apparent difficulties of the majority to get a vote on the measure.

But in casting his vote to disrupt Republican plans he went further than any of the leaders had expected.

Senators Cutting, Republican, New Mexico, and Couzens, Republican, Michigan, were the two Republicans who changed and brought about the tie.

Both Senators Reed and Hawes of Missouri voted against the adjournment resolution.

To Force All-Night Session.

Johnson was elated over the unexpected turn of events. He said he would seek to keep the Senate in continuous session as long as he could. He made preparations for an all-night session tonight.

After a conference, Republican leaders decided to let the Senate drift for the time being. "We'll see how they feel about adjournment along about Wednesday or Thursday, after a few all-night sessions," one leader told the United Press.

Despite the pessimistic outlook, opinion was expressed privately that there would be a bolt later in the day to force through a resolution for adjournment tomorrow.

North Carolina May Boost Cordell Hull

Saturday's State-Wide Precinct Primary Results Unknown Until June 9 But Tennesseean Wins Favor.

Raleigh, N. C., May 28.—True significance of Saturday's state-wide precinct primaries will not be known until the Democratic county conventions of June 9, several party leaders insisted today.

But supporters of Cordell Hull for the Democratic presidential nomination were enthusiastic and predicted the Tennesseean would receive state's endorsement in the convention of June 12.

Returns from all but 16 counties where precinct primaries were held showed Hull had 533 delegates to county conventions; Gov. Al Smith 379, while 652 were uninstructed, 103 doubtful and 36 pledged to support only a dry.

VOTE LAYMEN TO MEETING

M. E. CONFERENCE PRACTICALLY ENDS A 20-YEAR FIGHT.

TO ADJOURN TUESDAY

Divorce Question and Apostles' Creed Change May Be Decided at Session.

Kansas City, Mo., May 28.—"Lay members of the Methodist Episcopal Church scored a significant victory today when the General Conference in session here adopted a report which provided for admitting laymen to membership in the annual conference.

As now constituted annual conferences only admit ministers to membership. Today's action ends a fight which has been in progress for twenty years.

The report adopted today was presented by the committee on temporal economy and occasioned a spirited debate. It now must be adopted by two-thirds of the annual conferences before it can become a part of the church constitution.

The report provides that one layman in each pastoral charge shall be elected by the lay members of the congregation and shall sit in the annual conference. The plan will give laymen about equal representation with ministers in the annual conferences.

Only Two Days Left.

Much yet to be done and only two days in which to do it was the situation that faced Methodist delegates as they met in their general conference.

After voting Saturday to adjourn Tuesday, the conference lost some precious hours following the resignation of E. Stanley Jones, of India, newly elected bishop of Manila. Most of Saturday night was taken up with the matter, and it finally was decided to combine the Episcopacy areas of Manila and Malaya, with Edwin F. Lee, missionary bishop, placed in supervision of both provinces.

Two of the questions yet to come before the conference are: change of the apostles' creed to read "Christ's holy church," instead of the "Holy Catholic Church" and a change in divorce laws.

The divorce question is bound to create discussion, of which there cannot be too much if the conference is to adjourn tomorrow. The committee on the state of the church has amended the divorce laws to permit ministers to remarry a divorced person when he is convinced in his own mind that the true ground for divorce was adultery, and the person to be remarried is the innocent party of the divorce. At present the church permits only remarriage of divorce persons who are the innocent parties or separations on grounds of adultry as shown by court records.

Candidates' Expenses in Missouri Sought

Jefferson City, Mo., May 28.The Senate presidential campaign expenditures investigating committee today sought to carry its investigation into Missouri. Frederick Steiwer, chairman of the committee, wired Secretary of State Charles U. Becker asking for a list of expenditures made by presidential candidates in Missouri. In his reply Becker informed Steiwer that there is no record of expenditures available. The Missouri law does not require filing of expense accounts until thirty days after the election.

ITALIA RUMORS PROVE UNTRUE

MANY CONFLICTING MESSAGES AS TO LOST DIRIGIBLE.

NO WORD SINCE FRIDAY

One Report States Dirigible Has Landed in Alaska; Search by Steamer, Plane and Dog Sled.

By United Press

Out over the northernmost end of the world there flashed by radio today rumors, orders and messages of encouragement in the fight to save the crew of the lost polar dirigible Italia.

Five and one-half days have elapsed since the airship started on what was to have been a 40-hour excursion over the North Pole.

For two and one-half days there have been no authenticated message from the ship.

Rumors from all over the northern world have been circulated that the Italia has landed. The latest was that it landed in Alaska. Previous ones said it had landed at some unknown destination.

Proven Untrue.

One by one, most of these messages have proved untrue. They were largely messages from one station to another regarding the Italia, and were misinterpreted by intercepting stations.

The orders flashed out over the radio network in the northern world had to do with the greatest rescue expedition in history.

From eastern Siberia across Asia and still westward to Alaska, individuals were searching for the Italia or ready to help.

The Italia's base ship Citta Di Milano, which left Kings Bay yesterday morning on the first rescue expedition, was anchored at Dane's Island, off the Northwest coast of Spitzbergen, ready to start a search of the neighborhood, and was flashing out at frequent intervals a message to the Italia that help was coming.

Steamer to Take Aviator.

Lieut. Luetzon Holm, of the Norwegian navy, took off with a mechanic from Horten, the Seaplane base, to fly to Tromsoe, where the little icebreaking steamer, Hobby, was waiting for him—with dog sleds also aboard—to start for the Northeastern area of Spitzbergen.

The sealing steamship Heimland was searching the area southwest of Nova Zembla, off the Russian coast, for a sign of the Italia.

At Oslo, headquarters of the rescue work, Capt. Riiser-Larsen, by telegraph and radio, was broadcasting messages of instruction to official rescue ships, sealers, and hunters, trappers and fishermen in the far north—to any point that could be reached.

Reassuring Messages Sent.

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, May 28.—Out of the frozen Arctic regions there flashed at frequent intervals today this message to the lost polar dirigible Italia:

"We suppose you are somewhere in northern Spitzbergen. Be confident. We will help you."

The message was from the Italia's base ship, the Citta de Milano, anchored off Dane's Island at the northwest corner of Spitzbergen, the first starter among half a dozen rescue expeditions.

May Have Been Forced Down.

Communications direct from the Italia ceased Friday morning. Fears were expressed that silence from then on may have meant the crippled aircraft, struggling against powerful headwinds and with her power damaged, may have been forced down.

Many reports have been received in Kings Bay that distress signals have been received by low wave stations from Nobile.

None of the reports indicated where the vessel might be stranded and no one knew exactly where relief expeditions might be sent.

The Citta di Milano, relief ship that served as supply base for the Italia here, is stranded near Amsterdam Island by packed ice. Every effort is being made for the craft to proceed.

The Norwegian vessel Hobby will leave Tromsoe with Lieutenant Luetzow Holm, Norwegian aviator, and an airplane aboard. The Hobby is scheduled to make searches in the immediate Kings Bay area, while Holm will fly over much of the Spitzbergen area.

Another Steamer Chartered.

The steamship Braganza, reports said, has been chartered by the Italian government and will leave here today to search from the waters bordering on this northern settlement.

Possibly one or two of these vessels also may have dog sleds and hunters

Important Deposits of Potash in Texas

Washington, May 28.—New discoveries of potash salts—valued highly in farm fertilizer, chemical and war activities—in Texas wells drilled by government experts, were announced by the Interior Department today.

Department officials said these and previously discovered potash beds in time may make America independent of foreign potash fertilizer. The most promising "cores" came from wells in Ector county, Tex., where two potash beds were found 1,900 feet down.

The high court affirmed decisions of the Pennsylvania federal district court and the circuit court of appeals which held federal courts had no jurisdiction to issue the order sought by the committee, commanding delivery of the ballots.

UNWILLINGNESS TO DANCE COSTS MORROW $250

Mexico City, May 28.—Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow of the United States does not care to dance and this cost him $250 recently, it became known today. At a recent dance at the Polo Club, given for the benefit of the Y. W. C. A., Mrs. Morrow said she would give the fund $150 provided any of the young women were able to persuade Morrow to dance. The ambassador hearing of this outbid his wife so that he would not be forced to dance.

CAREFUL PRINCE, YOU CAN'T FALL FROM ONE OF THESE.

London, May 28.—The Prince of Wales has started using an airplane to keep engagements, in conformance with a policy announced a few weeks ago. Sunday evening Wales flew in a Bristol fighter—which has been assigned to his use—from Scarborough to Sandringham Palace to attend the birthday of Queen Mary.

Two Polish Aviators Plan Atlantic Flight

Paris, May 28.—Although still secretive about their plans Maj. Louis Idzikowski and Maj. Casimir Kubala still are hoping to make a successful westward flight across the Atlantic.

The Polish aviators are at Le Bourget Field supervising repairs on their big single-motored biplane which was damaged in a recent test flight.

A flight by way of the Azores is believed projected but Idzikowski and Kubala have not confided their exact plans.

It is understood the flight will be under the auspices of the Polish Ministry of War.

The biplane is of the S. E. C. M.-Amiot type with a Lorraine Dietrich motor of 650 horsepower. It is said to be capable of a 5,281-mile non-stop flight. The maximum speed is 138 miles an hour.

Women's Federation Convenes in Texas

19th Biennial Convention Opens in Texas—May Condemn "Wet" Candidates for National Offices.

San Antonio, Tex., May 28.—The 19th biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's clubs opened here today with approximately 5,000 women from every state in the Union and from several foreign and territorial countries in attendance.

Rhode Island delegates came virtually the entire way by water, making port at Galveston.

A resolution condemning "wet" candidates for national offices is expected to be introduced early in the convention. Since the federation is strongly non-partisan and has a policy against taking active part in politics, it is not likely any certain candidate will be condemned or approved.

The program of the eight departments has been built about this theme, "The Fine Art of Living: Making the Federation function in Daily Life." Foreign clubs, better equipped homes and illiteracy surveys are to be emphasized at the daily sessions.

A President's Mother As First Lady

Mrs. Ritchie, 76, Will Preside Over White House if Maryland's Bachelor-Governor If Elected by Voters in November.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the sixth of a series on prospective "First Ladies," by Allene Sumner, writer for Democrat-Forum and NEA Service. Today's article deals with Mrs. Elizabeth Cabell Ritchie, mother of Maryland's bachelor-governor, Albert C. Ritchie, who is a Democratic presidential aspirant.

By ALLENE SUMNER

Annapolis, Md., May 28.—If handsome Albert C. Ritchie, Maryland's unmarried governor, should be given the right to wind up the White House clock, put out the White House cat, and feed the White House goldfish, if any, after March 4, 1929, there would be a "regular old-fashioned mother of the garden pinks and lavender variety" as First Lady of the Land.

For the governor himself so described his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Cabell Ritchie, the present hostess of Maryland's beautiful old executive mansion in that way. And then he added:

"And you don't see many of them left these days!"

His beautiful mother is the one subject on which Governor Ritchie dares boast. He adores her in story-book style. He tells you how beautiful she is, how gracious and charming.

"Why, she even darns my socks!" he adds, boyishly.

Was Virginia Beauty.

But beautiful Mrs. Ritchie who was Miss Lizzie Cabell, a Virginian belle who even today brings tender reminiscenes from various silvery-haired "colonels" below the Mason-Dixon line, is not "Old Lady of the Chimney Corner."

One walks up the tulip-bordered brick walk of Maryland's executive mansion expecting to meet a fragile, bent little woman in lavender or gray wool shawl, knitting needles in hand, kindly blue eyes peering from behind spectacles perhaps—a replica of Whistler's "Mother."

But that picture is wrong.

One meets a dark-haired, dark-eyed, erect little woman whom one refuses to believe has lived the 76 years biographical history accords her. She has the charm of old-fashioned mothers of chimney corner days, but she is, too, as modern as silk hose and telephones from America to Paris.

She is the old-fashioned pinks and hollyhocks and cosmos and zenias all mixed up with orchids and American beauty roses and double hothouse violets.

I'd hate for the governor himself to read this diagnosis, for no lady ever gives another lady away. But—I just wonder—if that twinkle in the lovely lady mother's eyes as she bent over "Albert's" gubernatorial socks didn't mean that maybe a very modern little lady finds it very diplomatic to play the "mother of the chimney corner" role.

"Men do so love home women," she says. "Albert likes to find me here at night with my darning or mending basket."

His Favorite Dish.

And, too, the pickled pigs' feet—"Albert's" favorite dish—which his dainty little mother sees are upon the gubernatorial table at frequent intervals, though she feels that pigs' feet are not just the aristocratic diet for a Cabell and a Ritchie and a governor.

Here is the most recent picture of Mrs. Elizabeth Cabell Ritchie, taken only a few years ago. The governor's mother looks very little older today, still showing traces of the beauty that made her famous as a Virginia belle in her youth.

There's a decided smell in "Albert's" study, too, in the lovely old mansion. It's the accumulated aroma of the many smokes "Albert" must have when working far into the night on affairs of state. The First Lady does wish that the study were a bit more fragrant, but if "Albert" likes it like that, he shall have it.

Maryland's executive mansion here in quaint old Annapolis keeps open house to Maryland's citizenry. Most anyone, upon request, can walk up the flower-bordered walk to the white doorway and find the door already open and a smiling servant announcing cordially:

"Just walk right through all the rooms and look at anything you want to."

Though home life is very sweet to the Ritchies, mother and son, they believe that the storied old brick mansion belongs to the people as well as to themselves.

And if the visitors don't seem properly apreciative of the most beautiful Colonial stairway remaining in the country which coils its slim balustrated way up three flights and into a lovely shadowy dome, the First Lady will herself come forth from some corner to point out its beauty.

Purest Aristocrats.

The Ritchies are purest aristocrats. Mrs. Ritchie's grandfather, William Cabell, was governor of Virginia from 1805 to 1808, and was later chief justice of the Virginia Court of Apepals. A grand uncle, Joseph Cabell, served in the Virginia House of Delegates for thirty years and declined a cabinet position offered him by President James Monroe. He was Jefferson's right-hand man in founding the University of Virginia.

Mrs. Ritchie's father, Dr. Robert Gamble Cabell, was a famous Virginia doctor. James Branch Cabell, the novelist, is Mrs. Ritchie's nephew, the governor's cousin.

Her marriage to Judge Albert Ritchie, a prominent lawyer of Baltimore, in 1875, was a society event of the year. The governor's father died in 1903.

But blue-bloodedness has not made either Ritchie, mother or son, lose the common touch. No people could be more warmly human, considerate, hospitable, and atune with humanity in general.

She Loves Flowers.

It is the governor's mother who sees that the walk to the mansion is constantly bordered with flowers. "When the tulips go," the governor explains, "the next flowers, whatever they are, begin to bloom. She sees to that."

There is a radio tucked away under the big staircase and a coat rack laden with the governor's various coats. It's a homey corner. Here the First Lady is sometimes found, radio program on, sitting with her mending basket, to be seen by "Albert" the minute he comes home from his hard day's work in the statehouse just aeross the street.

The dirigible Italia left Kings Bay Wednesday morning bound on its third and most adventurous cruise of the present polar expedition. There were 16 men aboard including Nobile. The fuel supply was for 72 hours in the air. The food supply was estimated to be sufficient for a month. Each man was equipped with skils and sleeping bags, as a precautionary measure should the dirigible come to land on the ice-covered area.

Aviator on Rescue Flight.

Oslo, Norway, May 28.—Lieut. Lutzow Holm, naval aviator, left in a seaplane for Tromsoe today to go to the rescue of the stricken dirigible Italia.

Lieutenant Holm was accompanied by a mechanic. The plane will join the ice-breaking steamer Hobby at Tromsoe, and proceed from there to northern Spitzbergen waters.

Holm took off from Horten, the seaplane base in Christiana Fjord, at 5:30 A. M., E. S. T. for a flight of nearly 700 miles to Tromsoe, where the sturdy little Hobby was awaiting him.

With the Hobby as mother ship, Holm and his mechanic will scout the entire northern territory.

U. S. Radio Operators Active.

Hartford, Conn., May 28.—American amateur radio operators are organized to pick up any message from the lost polar dirigible Italia, officials of the American Radio League Headquarters here said today.

Through station IMK at Brainard Field, the league endeavored without success through the night to reach the Italia. At midnight, operator Robert Parmenter arranged with L. A. Jones, operator aboard the non-metalic steamship Carnegie in mid-ocean, to co-operate in trying to reach General Umberto Nobile's craft.

Pacific coast stations, which were reported to have heard from the Italia last night, were instructed to report to the league.

Signals heard last night from station AB-RAO3 were sent from the laboratory of the Far East University, Vladivostok, Siberia, according to A. U. Hebert, treasurer of the league. It was possible the repeated pleas for assistance sent out by the Siberian station might have been picked up from the Italia's improved sending set and rebroadcast, he said.

Shoes Often Spoil Your Popularity

Long ago a very hot tempered king threw one of the ladies of his court out of a window, because she complained incessantly about her shoes. Society has grown a bit kinder, outwardly, toward the person who limps into every party, but no one likes it any better, and the man or woman who wishes to be popular must see to it that their feet do not "simply kill them."

Comfortable feet are largely a matter of well made shoes plus a little common sense in selection. If you will bring us your foot troubles we honestly believe we can help you select shoes that are suited to both your needs and your feet.

TO INSIST ON CITY LICENSE

MOTORISTS WITH NONE WILL FACE ARREST.

DOUGAN BACK ON JOB

Chief of Police, Refreshed by Vacation, Is Instructed to Check Up On Drivers.

Chief of Police B. F. Dougan returned Saturday night from a two weeks' vacation and was given a heavy assignment this morning by Mayor W. O. Garrett. A drive will be launched Thursday morning to arrest all owners or operators of trucks and automobiles who have not obtained city licenses for their vehicles.

Mayor Garrett said there was "no sense" of some one hundred or more owners of cars operating vehicles without a city license and that the city administration was going to enforce the ordinance by causing arrests.

A notice appears elsewhere in this issue, above the name of the chief of police, notifying the delinquent car owners that only two more days are left in which to get the city plates and that beginning Thursday arrests will be made.

The penalty for failing to provide a license is a minimum fine of $5 and costs.

The city license books show that 961 plates had been issued up to this morning. There are generally about 1100 sold in the course of the year. The chief of police was checking up the names today of those who had not bought the auto tags and had a list of more than 100.

Rev. L. M. Hale Says Wayman Should Quit

Former Pastor Here Takes Stand in Controversy Over William Jewell President.

The Rev. L. M. Hale of the Springfield, Mo., First Baptist Church, formerly pastor of the Baptist Church of Maryville, says H. C. Wayman, president of the William Jewell College at Liberty, Mo., must resign. The following is from the Springfield Leader:

The Rev. Dr. L. M. Hale of the First Baptist church said that H. C. Wayman, president of William Jewell college, whose resignation has been requested, is guilty of dishonorable conduct; that his presence at the head of such an institution "is a disgrace" and that his resignation must come some time and should be had "before the school is more greatly harmed."

The Rev. Dr. Hale said today he was willing now to make public a letter which he had previously sent to alumni of the college and ministers of his acquaintance, explaining his stand in the matter. He returned yesterday from Liberty, where he had attended a meeting of the alumni of the school, in which a protest against the president was made.

Chamber Asks Resignation.

The Chamber of Commerce at Liberty yesterday requested the resignation of the president, saying that, regardless of the merits or demerits of the controversy, the man's usefulness to the college was at an end, and that it was to the best interests of both the college and the community that he resign.

Dr. Wayman has been hissed by the students of the college in public appearances and it is the opinion of the Rev. Dr. Hale that they have no confidence whatever in him.

"I have been unwilling to make public my stand before because I hoped that any controversy here might be averted," the Rev. Dr. Hale said. "However, there has now been so much said about it that I feel I should declare my stand."

The Rev. Dr. Hale resigned from the board of trustees in March, at the time he made accusations that the president was claiming degrees which he did not possess, and was not truthful in his statements. "It is not so much his actually claiming what he did not have, though to me that is like stealing anything else," the local minister said, "as it is his conduct afterward. The attempt to make the fight appear one between fundamentalism and modernism is simply an attempt to cover up the real issue."

The young man had been a student at Western Military Academy, Princeton Preparatory school and the University of Nebraska where he was a member of Sigma Chi. He was attending Kansas City-Western Dental College of Lincoln and Lee University at Kansas City. His father is dean of the dental college.

162 STATIONS OFF THE AIR

RADIO COMMISSION ISSUES DRASTIC ORDER.

MIDDLEWEST IS HIT

91 Applications for Renewal of Licenses in This Section Are Denied.

Washington, May 28.—The Federal Radio Commission acted drastically today to clear the ether of interference by notifying 162 broadcasting stations that their licenses will not be renewed.

All existing broadcasting licenses were extended until August 1, when the stations whose licenses are cancelled must stop broadcasting. The commission set Monday, July 9, as the date for a hearing at which these stations may appear and present arguments why they should be permitted to continue.

Stations in every zone except the third, or Southern section, are affected by the cancellation order. Most of the broadcasters ordered to discontinue are in the fourth, or middle western zone, where ninety-one applications for renewal of licenses were denied. New England loses thirty-six of its smaller stations, the Eastern states thirty and the Pacific coast five.

No large stations were among the 162 killed by the commission. Licenses of seven portable broadcasting stations were renewed until August 1, when they all expire.

"Twelfth Night," Senior Play, Meets With Great Success

Cesario turned out to be Viola and married her master, Orsino, Duke of Illyria, and Olivia discovered that she had not married Cesario, but Cesario's brother Sebastian, and everything turned out all right in the end.

So ended the "Twelfth Night" by William Shakespeare, which was presented as the senior class play at the State Teachers College auditorium Saturday night. This was the only Shakespearian play to have been presented in Maryville in several years, and the enthusiastic and large audience which was present to hear it is conclusive proof that the play was a success in every respect. The costuming was excellent.

One of the most striking characteristics of the presentation of "Twelfth Night" was the excellence with which the characters had been chosen. If individual honors were to be given the players, Miss Mary Goodpasture, playing the dual role of Viola and Cesario, and Samuel Urban, as Sir Toby Belch, Uncle to Olivia, would tie for first.

Good Characterization.

Miss Goodpasture interpreted her role with ease and sincerity. She seemed perfectly free, yet there was a certain restraint which added charm and interest to her characterization.

Urban, as Sir Toby, played to perfection the part of the sly old uncle who liked a mug of good wine and a good time better than anything. His swaggering gait and his hearty laugh put the audience to much mirth.

All of the principals, however, were outstanding. Miss Margaret Quinlan, playing the difficult role of the Clown, always an outstanding character in any play of Shakespeare's, proved to be an excellent interpreter of the part. She was perfectly at home on the stage, was active and light on her feet, and never failed to bring laughter from the audience by the subtle and sparkling wit which filled the play. She said, "Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb, like the sun: it shines everywhere."

Leland Medsker, as Malvolio, Steward to Olivia, was very good. His characterization of the staunch old Puritan type of a fellow who had nothing to do with foolery, but who let his egotism get the best of him when he found a "fake" love letter was a delight to the audience. The letter had been put in his way by Maria, a servant, played by Miss Rebecca Briggs, Sir Toby, Sir Andrew Aguecheek, played by Marvin Westfall, and Fabian, another servant, played by Stewart Tulloch, and was the most humorous plot of the play.

Westfall a Scream.

Sir Andrew Aguecheek, alias Marvin Westfall, was a scream! His bravery was unsurpassed until the time came for him to prove himself a warrior, and then it (the bravery) was nowhere to be found. Sir Andrew wanted to be in everything until he got into trouble and then he wanted to be far away. Mr. Westfall played the part to perfection.

And when Maria, played by Miss Rebecca Briggs, got with Sir Toby, Sir Andrew and Fabian, mischief was in the air. Miss Briggs carried out the idea of the mischievious servant girl throughout the entire play and did it commendably.

Miss Mary Fields, as Olivia, had one of the leading roles in the drama. She maintained a queenly air at all times. Her manner was refined, and her very walk reminded one of a princess.

Brilliant Scene.

Orsino, Duke of Illyria, who tried to force his affections on Olivia, was played by Gerald Carroll. He made his appearance in the second scene when the curtain arose on the gorgeous setting of the Duke's palace. There were musicians and pages, brilliantly colored costumes, and other necessities to a court scene. It was in this scene that Vernon Barrett as Curio, one of the gentlemen attending Orsino, sang "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes." Other attendants were Francis Edwards as Valentine, and Dean Johnson as Salanio.

Sebastian, a brother to Viola, who was supposed to have been drowned, was excellently played by William Gaugh. He had the dash and enthusiasm one would expect to find in a brave young courtier.

The characters of Roberto and Antonio, sea captains, were taken by Oren Masters and Fred Smith respectively. Miss Hazel Sullivan and Miss Alice Hastings were ladies attending Olivia, and Claud Schaffer took the part of the Friar. Joseph Hathaway and Russell McCoy as officers also had minor speaking parts.

Miss Lucille Sturm and Miss Wave Duncan as pages, and Mrs. William Gaugh, Miss Mary Yeisley, Miss Vada Cliser, and William Gaugh as musicians had non-speaking parts.

Credit to Directors.

Much credit for the success of the performance should go to Miss Blanche Dow, head of the dramatics department, and Miss Gladys Criswell, teacher of dramatics, who directed the play. It was one of the most difficult works attempted by the dramatics department for several years, and was very creditably done. The costuming and scenery were brilliant and effective and thoroughly in keeping with the age and spirit of the play.

Miss Dow and Miss Criswell were assisted by Miss Olive DeLuce of the art department who directed the staging, and by H. O. Hickernell, director of the college orchestra, who directed the music. The music was well chosen, spontaneous, and added to the general interest of the performance. The lighting effects were also particularly well worked out. Jessie Michaelson, who has been assisting in the department of physics this winter was the electrician.

Miss Hazel Hawkins was the business manager. Max Reigard was chairman of the advertising committee and Mrs. William Gaugh was chairman of the stage committee.

The play itself was interesting and moved swiftly for an amateur performance. From the excellent comments heard about it, a Shakespearian play meets with approval in Maryville.

Louis LaFonte to Be Buried Tomorrow

Louis LaFonte, who died May 12 at the city police station, and whose body has not been claimed, will be buried in the Potter's field of the city cemetery tomorrow afternoon.

A short funeral service will be conducted at the Price chapel at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon by the Rev. W. S. Woodhull of the First M. E. Church and burial will be in Oak Hill cemetery.

LaFonte got off the early Wabash train here on May 12. He was taken to the police station after the conductor would not let him be a passenger on the 6:30 Wabash out of here because of his condition. LaFonte was unwilling to give the city officials any information regarding relatives or his home. He died at 4 o'clock that afternoon of acute pneumonia. He had been suffering with tuberculosis also.

The body has been held in the morgue in the hopes of some one claiming it but after two weeks the city has decided to bury the body.

GIRL ALONE

COPYRIGHT 1928 BY NEA SERVICE — By ANNE AUSTIN — AUTHOR OF "SAINT AND SINNER"

THIS HAS HAPPENED

SALLY FORD, ward of the state orphanage from the time she is four, is "farmed out" to CLEM CARSON when she is 16. She meets DAVID NASH, athlete and student who is working on the farm for the summer. Carson makes remarks about David's friendship with Sally and the student strikes him a terrific blow.

Sally and David flee and join a carnival. David as cook's helper and Sally in a sideshow disguised as "Princess Lalla," crystal gazer. NITA, Hula dancer, who knows the police are after the newcomers and who is infatuated with David, threatens to expose Sally if she doesn't keep "hands off" the young student.

The carnival goes next to Capital City, where Sally spent so many years in the orphanage. She successfully eludes detection under the disguise of the crystal gazer until one afternoon when the orphans troop in with their hostess, a beautiful woman who fascinates Sally. One of the children recognizes Sally and shouts her name, but GUS, the barker, comes to her rescue and diverts attention. Sally is surprised to see the beautiful "Lady Bountiful" stop and talk with a well-dressed, handsome Easterner who earlier in the afternoon has teasingly read Sally's fortune in the crystal and asked her to go to supper with him.

That night a terrible storm blows up and when the tent falls Sally finds herself supported in the arms of a man who had spoken to her earlier in the day. He tells her he knows her real identity. When they are rescued from under the tent, Sally learns the carnival safe has been robbed and that David and Nita are missing. She pleads with Bybee, carnival owner, not to send the police after David until he has had a chance to return. At last he agrees. Sally goes out in the night to find him. At daybreak she sees him coming toward her, a wound in his shoulder. Back on the train he tells of following Nita and STEVE as they fled with the money.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 34

Enid Barr and Arthur Van Horne moved away from "Princess Lalla's" platform together, Enid's golden head held high, her lovely voice staccato with anger; but Sally, although she was guilty of trying to do so, could not distinguish a word that was being said.

Near the front exit of the tent Van Horne was greeted boisterously by a party of Capital City society men and women, laden with trophies from the gambling concessions on the midway. He was swept into the party, which Enid Barr refused to join, shaking her little golden head stubbornly and pretending a great interest in the midget, "Pitty Sing," whose platform was nearest the exit.

Although Sally was at liberty to leave the tent until the final performance at 11 o'clock, she sat on in her throne-like chair, hoping and yet fearing that the beautiful woman would return and ask her the question which Van Horne's unwelcome interruption had left unspoken.

Enid spoke to "Pitty Sing" in her proud, offhand manner, paid a dollar for one of the midget's cheap little postcard pictures of herself, refused to take the change and was turning toward Sally's platform again when Winfield Bybee entered the tent with Gus, the barker.

Sally, watching Enid, saw the woman's involuntary start of recognition as Bybee crossed her path, saw her hesitate, then turn toward him, determination stamped on her lovely, sensitive face.

When Bybee had bared his head deferentially and was bending over the small woman to hear her low-spoken words, Sally was seized with fright. She knew instinctively that Enid Barr's questions concerned her, but whether they concerned Sally Ford, running away from the state orphanage, or "Princess Lalla," fake crystal gazer, she had no way of knowing. All she knew for certain was that Enid had overheard Betsey's shriek: "That's not Princess Lalla. That's Sally Ford—playacting!" And she fled, feeling Enid's eyes upon her but not daring to look back.

There was less than half an hour before the next and final show was to start. She spent the time in the dress tent, wishing with all her heart that she was through work for the day and that she could go to David. Poor David! Lying wounded in a stuffy, hot berth, tormented with worries as to the future and possibly with regrets for the past, while Eddie Cobb strutted on the midway as the hero of the safe robbery.

It would be better for David, infinitely better, if she could screw up her courage to the point of going back to the orphanage and taking her punishment. It would be so simple! She had only to seek out Enid Barr and say to her: "I am Sally Ford! Send for Mrs. Stone." And perhaps Enid would intercede for her, for she seemed so very kind.

"Wake up, Sally," Bess one of the dancers of the "girlie show," called to her, as she came shuffling into the tent on tortured feet. "Gus is ballyhooing your show."

Yes, her mind was made up. She would tell Enid Barr, beg her to intercede with the orphanage for her, and with the police for David. But there was no Enid Barr among the audience at the last show of the evening, and even Van Horne was absent. In spite of her good resolutions, Sally felt an immense relief. Reprieve! She certainly would not give herself up if there was no one to give up to!

"Going to the show train to see David?" Gus whispered, when the last show was finished and the audience was straggling toward the exits.

"Of course!" Sally cried. "Is he worse? Don't hide anything from me, Gus—"

"Worse!" Gus laughed. "Bybee says he's yelling for food and threatens to get up and cook it himself if they don't give him something besides mush and milk. Come along! I'll walk you over to the show train. You're too pretty to be allowed to go alone. Some village dude would be trying to kidnap you."

They found David sitting up in his berth, working cross-word puzzles, Mrs. Bybee sitting on the edge of his bed to jot down the words as he gave them to her.

"Reckon you won't need the old lady now that the young 'un's come to hold your hand and make a fuss over you," Mrs. Bybee grumbled jealously.

"What's that? What's that?" Winfield Bybee, who had come over from the carnival grounds in a service car, demanded from the doorway. "Been flirting with my wife, young man? Reckon I'll have to put the gloves on with you when that crippled wing of yours is O. K. Well Sally, old Pop has done you another good turn."

Sally paled and reached instinctively for David's left hand. "Oh! you mean—Mrs. Barr, the lady who was talking to you?"

"Nothing else but!" Bybee nodded, smiling at her. "She tried to make me admit you was Sally Ford and I acted innocent as a new-born lamb. Told her you'd been with us since we left New York."

"Why is she so interested in Sally, Mr. Bybee?" David asked quietly.

"She 'lowed a varnival wasn't no place for a pure young girl," Bybee chuckled. "She said they was awful anxious over at the ophanage to get Sally back, away from her life of sin, and that pers'n'ly she took a powerful interest in unfortunate girls and was determined to see Sally safe back in the Home of 'Princess Lalla' was Sally Ford. I lied like a gentleman for you, child. Told her she was a nice little dame and all that, but clear off her base in this instance. Reckon I put it across all right, for she shut up and beat it pretty soon."

"I think she's wonderful," Sally surprised them all by speaking up almost sharply. "She's just trying to be kind. She doesn't know how awful an Orphans' home can be."

"Come along, Mother. Let's give these two kids a chance. But you mustn't stay long, Sally. Tomorrow's Saturday, and you oughta be enough of a trouper by now to know what that means. We head South Saturday night, riding all day Sunday."

"Out of the state?" Sally and David cried in unison.

"Yep. Out of the state. You kids'll be safe then. The police ain't going to bother about extradition for a couple of juvenile delinquents. So long, Dave boy. Don't let this little Jane keep you awake too late.

"I'll leave in 15 minutes," Sally promised joyfully.

And she kept her promise. Her lips were smiling tenderly, secretly at the memory of David's goodnight kiss, when she left the car and began to look about for someone to walk back to the carnival grounds with her, for she was to sleep in the dress tent that night, the storm-soaked mattresses having dried in the sun all day.

Gus had told her he would be waiting for her, but she could not find him. She went the length of the train to the privilege car, pushing open the door sufficiently to peep within. At least a score of men of the carnival family were seated at three or four tables, their heads almost unrecognizable through the thick layers of cigar and cigaret smoke. There was little conversation except an occasional oath, but the steady clacking of poker chips upon the bare tables came to her distnictly.

She closed the door noiselessly and jumped from the platform of the coach to the ground. It would be mean to disturb Gus, she reflected, for he loved poker better than anything except ballyhoo, and there was no real reason why she should not walk to the carnival grounds alone.

Of course she would be conspicuous on the streets in her "Princess Lalla" costume and make-up, but if she paid no attention to anyone who tried to accost her, there was certainly not much danger. She began to run, leaving the train swiftly behind her, but she slowed to a sedate walk when she had reached the business streets through which she had to pass to reach the carnival grounds.

She was crossing Capitol Avenue, at the end of which sat the great white stone structure which gave the street its name, when a limousine skidded to a sudden stop and an all-to-familiar voice sang out:

"Princess Lalla! What in the world are you doing out alone at this time of night?"

Sally contemplated flight, but the limousine blocked her path. Before she could turn back the way she had come Van Horne stepped out of the tonneau of the car.

"Let me drive you to the carnival grounds, Sally," he urged in a low voice, completely devoid of mockery for once. "It's really not safe for you to be out alone dressed like that. Come along! Don't be prudish, child! I'm not going to harm you. Remember, I'm not that kind of man!" And he laughed as he almost lifted her into the car.

She sank back upon the cushions, feeling their depth and softness with a childish awe. The chauffeur started the car, and Van Horne dropped a hand lightly over hers as he leaned back and regarded her quizzically.

"I'm glad I ran into you," he told her. "I suppose you've been told that Enid—Mrs. Barr—is hot on your trail?"

"Yes," Sally nodded, her lips too stiff with sudden fright to form the word.

"She's almost convinced that you're really Sally Ford," he told her lightly. "And if she makes up her mind, there's nothing in heaven or hell that can stop Enid Barr. A damnably persistent little wretch! I've never been able to understand Enid's passion for succoring 'fallen girls.' She appears to be such a normal little pagan otherwise."

Sally said nothing because she could not. But her sapphire eyes were enormous and her mouth was twitching piteously.

"Listen, Sally," Van Horne leaned toward her suddenly, crushing her little brown-painted hands between his own immaculate white ones. "Let me get you out of this mess! I've been thinking a lot about you—too damned much for my peace of mind! And this is what I want to do—"

"Please!" Sally gasped, shrinking far into the corner of the seat, but unable to tear her hands from his.

"Wait till you've heard what I have to say, before you begin acting like a pure and innocent maid in the clutches of a movie villain!" Van Horne commanded her scornfully.

"I want to send you to New York, give you a year in a dancing academy that trains girls for the stage, and a year in dramatic school—both at the same time, if possible. You've got the figure and the looks and the personality for a musical comedy star, or Arthur Van Horne is the 'rube' that you carnival people call him. What do you say, Sally? Think of it! A year or two with nothing to worry about except your studies and your dancing and then—Broadway! I'll put you over if I have to buy a show for you! Come, Sally! Say 'thank you, Van. I'll be ready to leave tomorrow.'"

URGES SOUTH BE LET ALONE

ple. In the towns and cities there are white quarters and colored quarters.

"And in the division of labor the lines are drawn. 'To every man his work' is a Bible statement of facts as you find them in Dixie. The negro has his work, and the white man has his field of labor. And neither is permitted to do the work of the other. The negro is the laborer; the white man is the superintendent."

The Reverend Mr. Lakin here declared he was "stating facts, not arguing them nor defending them."

"The white man who is able only to work with his hands would not be permitted to labor in a group of negroes, even though he offered to work for nothing. This is even more true among the women who toil.

Two Worlds Side by Side.

"Dixie has two worlds," the minister declared. "There is the white man's world and the black man's world. And it is possible for either to live there and to know but little of the other man's world. The fact is that the misunderstandings there are largely the result of ignorance—the failure of one man to know the other man's world. I know of no other section where the line that separates the races is so clearly and distinctly drawn. No other place where two worlds exist side by side as they do in the South.

"The argument is advanced that this program of segregation works a hardship upon the negro. I speak my convictions here, and I speak deliberately: This scheme furnishes the negro, in the South, a world in which to live—otherwise he would have no world at all. To break down the barriers that separate the white and the black would ultimately rob the negro of what he has. The slow moving, thoughtless, pleasure loving and pleasure seeking black of the South cannot compete with others. When the negro's world is not restricted and becomes an open field for any who enter, the negro is in a bad way indeed. The field of manual labor at present is reserved for him. In that he labors. From that he lives.

More Hardship on Poor White.

"This division of labor works a greater hardship upon the white man than it does upon the negro. The white man who knows only manual labor is in the most pitiful plight that I can conceive. His only door there is closed. The negro's world may be restricted, but it is reserved at least. On the other hand the white man's world is restricted, and often not reserved.

"I shall make this startling statement: Segregation makes for peace. The difficulties of the South, the injustice that is perpetrated there, the moral delinquencies advertised so extensively—all are as nothing as compared to what they would be if the segregation idea were not insisted upon. Throw the two races together in the field or the shop, and murder would be the rule. Put the children into the schools together and war only would describe the scene. Blot out your color line and God only knows what would happen.

"Segregation in the South is the best peace measure of which I could think."

Trespass Causes Trouble.

It is only in case of trespass by one or the other that friction results between the races, the minister declared.

While endorsing segregation, he suggested that both classes in the South need to develop a "sense of independence."

"Old Sam down South," he explained, "has always felt that Old Boss would not let him and Sarah suffer, and he has not worried very much about himself—and so he's poor."

The prevalence of lying and theiving among the southern negro, Mr. Lakin attributed to two factors: One the attitude which expects such offenses and condones them; the other the fact that the planter stands between the negro and the law, so that the worker feels no personal responsibility. He explained the working of the system whereby the employer pays the fine and secures the release of a drunken or thieving employe, rather than lose his labor, charging the cost against the employe's share of the crop in the fall.

Religion and Education.

The interference with labor in busy seasons explains also what often is construed as hostility to religion and education among the negroes of the South, the Reverend Mr. Lakin said. He pointed out again that the two races live in different worlds and that any religious or educational program for the negro should be adapted to his needs.

"It has become quite common," the speaker cautioned, "for those at a distance to speak knowingly on the subject of southern problems. The farther people are from real problems, the more dogmatic they seem to be. What I am trying to say is this: The criticism heaped upon the South because of its real or imaginary harshness in dealing with the negro problem is provoking a bitterness that otherwise would not be. Problems in the South must be solved in the South."

For Negro Teachers.

White teachers for the negro, he declared, are "agents of discord, although not because of any fault of their own. I am persuaded that their usefulness is nil, or practically so. At least the good they do is more than offset by the harm that results.

"The negro has rights that we have not recognized—inalienable rights. He has a right to his home—a home free from intrusion. His school and his church ought to be his. We talk about the indiginous church for China and India, and still we intrude ourselves into the negro's sanctuary. The negro is no fool, and there are men among them of splendid powers. They are proud of their great men—prouder than most people are. And the whote man's assumption of superiority is resented—and rightly so.

"Place the negro over the negro school and its efficiency will be doubled.

"The negro must be taught to have pride in his own race. His ideals must be found in his own people. He must be made to look to his own institutions. He needs to be given responsibility. He needs to understand that he can either sink or swim, and that he may have his choice. Then and only then will he put forth efforts that will develop and make him."

Final Grain Review.

Chicago, May 28.—Heavy selling by Northwest houses on scattered rains over the Canadian wheat belt sent futures lower on the board of trade today. Covering by shorts held corn up, but oats dropped with wheat.

The wheat market was unsettled with selling induced by scattered rains over the Canadian Northwest and forecasts for rain in the Dakotas. Selling was by Northwest houses, but locals bought heavily on the general belief that precipitation to relieve dry conditions must be large. The cash market, with 18 cars received, was ½c lower.

Corn showed more strength than wheat with short covering righting the oversold condition of the market. Receipts were larger than expected, at 427 cars, and the cash market was unchanged to ½c lower.

Oats were off 2c at one time and showed little rallying power. Receipts were exceptionally large, 239 cars, indicating that farmers generally are satisfied with present conditions. The cash market dropped 2 to 2½c. Provisions were about unchanged.

QUITMAN AT TOP OF HEAP

BUT FOUR TEAMS, TIED, ARE CLOSE SECOND.

COMETS CLIMB A RUNG

Hopkins Is Defeated Here in Fast Game With Three Double Killings.—Clearmont Also Loses.

Standing of the Teams.

Team	W.	L.	Pct.
Quitman	4	1	.800
Maryville	3	2	.600
Hopkins	3	2	.600
Clearmont	3	2	.600
Barnard	3	2	.600
Bolckow	2	3	.400
Burlington Junction	1	4	.200
Guilford	1	4	.200

Quitman was undisputed leader today in the Nodaway county baseball league. It was the only team out of the three which were tied for leadership last week which came through with a victory yesterday. Quitman defeated Bolckow 8 to 7 on the Bolckow diamond, while Clearmont lost, 3 to 10, on the Guilford diamond, and Maryville beat Hopkins on the local diamond, 5 to 3.

Barnard, which was tied with three teams for fourth place last week, moved up a notch in the percentage column by trouncing Burlington Junction, 8 to 2, on the Burlington Junction diamond. Guilford won its first game of the season.

Four Tied for Second.

Four teams are now tied with a .600 percentage, each having won three and lost two games. They are Maryville, Hopkins, Clearmont and Barnard. Burlington Junction and Guilford are tied for seventh and eighth place in the league with one game won and four lost.

There are only six more weeks before the first half of the split season ends and with five of the teams so evenly bunched, the race is yet uncertain.

A home run by Laughlin and three double plays featured yesterday's game between Maryville and Hopkins on the old fair grounds here when the Comets turned in their third victory of the season by a 5 to 3 score.

Laughlin and Thorburn were the opposing pitchers and neither issued a walk. Laughlin was touched for seven hits, while the Comets got eight off Thorburn. Five errors by the Hopkins players marred Thorburn's record.

Hopes of Comet Fans Soar.

The Comets moved up into a tie for second place by defeating Hopkins, an old time rival, and the hitting of the Maryville team gave the Maryville fans hopes of seeing the Comets move into first position before the first half of the season closes July 8.

Laughlin's home run came in the last half of the seventh inning when the score was tied 3-all and there were no men on bases. Augustine, Maryville shortstop, had struck out and Laughlin was next to bat. Cecil Mayes clouted a two-base hit after Laughlin had done his damage. Brennan went to first on a fielder's choice and Scott, playing third, made a sacrifice out at first to score Mayes.

Maryville commenced the scoring in the fourth inning. Brennan went out, Thorburn to Clutter. R. Mayes was safe on first by Peve's error. Hise forced Mayes at second and then Carmichael catcher, faced Thorburn. He poled out a hit good for three bases, scoring Hise, and then Carmichael trotted across the plate when Burks singled. Arthur struck out.

Error Responsible for Score.

In the next inning Augustine was safe on first on Henning's error. Laughlin singled and both runners advanced while C. Mayes struck out. Augustine scored when Henning let one get past him. Brennan flied out to Baldwin. R. Mayes struck out.

Hopkins scored twice in the sixth inning. Mathers flied out to Arthur. Davis was out Burks to Brennan. Clutter singled; Clark singled. Baldwin hit to Brennan, who knocked it down but Baldwin was safe. Clutter and Clark advancing one base. Peve singled over second base and Baldwin ran to second where he was trapped, Arthur to Augustine, but Clutter and Clark scored.

In the next inning Hopkins scored again. Henning went out at first, Thorburn struck out, Reeder got a single and came home on Mathers' two-bagger.

Tunney and Dempsey Matched, Writer Says

New York, May 28.—Hype Igoe, boxing writer of the New York World, in an article today said he had learned from a source he was unable to mention that Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey had been signed to meet in a heavyweight championship boxing bout in September.

"I know that Tunney is signed to meet Dempsey in September," Igoe's story said. "If Dempsey has a change of heart or makes good in his theatrical venture to the extent of forgetting about ring work then there might be a switch in the cards, but right now Rickard has Gene signed to fight Dempsey. If he denies it I have other ways of proving it."

WATCHING THE SCOREBOARD.

By United Press

Yesterday's hero: Cliff Heathcote, Chicago Cubs' utility outfielder, whose three hits drove in two runs and helped the Cubs beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3 to 0. Sheriff Blake won his fifth consecutive game of the season without defeat.

The New York Giants beat the Philadelphia Phillies twice, 5 to 4 and 2 to 1, and leaped from fifth to third place in the National League. Melvin Ott's single in the eleventh won the first game while Don Hurst's wild throw in the ninth permitted Terry to score the winning run in the second game.

Carl Mays blanked the St. Louis Cardinals before a crowd of 38,000 fans who braved rain and cold to see the Cincinnati Reds win, 2 to 0, and maintain their one-game lead in the National League.

The Brooklyn Robins and Boston Braves divided a doubleheader, Ed Brandt beating the Robins in the first game, 4 to 1, and Jumbo Elliott taming the Braves in the second, 8 to 3.

The Washington Senators broke their nine-game losing streak by beating the Philadelphii Athletics, 4 to 1. Irving Hadley allowed only two hits, a single and double by Max Bishop.

Pounding George Uhle for fifteen hits, the St. Louis Browns won from the Cleveland Indians, 10 to 8.

PLAYS "WILD WEST;" GETS BROKEN BONE

Junior Robey, Thrown From One Pony, Trampled by Another, Not Aware of Injury.

Laverne Robey of Hollywood, Cal., recently sent his prother, Junior Robey, a full cowboy outfit and the 10-year-old recipient was very proud of it.

Last week he went to the country to stay for a few days while his sister, Mrs. Fern Crull, with whom he makes his home, was at Columbia. Junior stayed at the home of D. Horton, southeast of Parnell, who is a cousin of Mrs. Crull.

On Wednesday the boys of that vicinity had a big round-up. Pony racing and the riding of steers was included in the fun. During the day Junior was thrown from a bull calf. Again he was thrown from a pony during a race. The pony shied and when Junior tumbled off, one of the other ponies in the race ran over him.

Junior felt somewhat bruised up at the end of the day but did not think any bones were broken. But on Saturday an X-ray was taken of his right collar bone, which showed that it was fractured.

The fracture was reduced and the lad is recovering. He was able to run around and play ball with the broken collar bone from Wednesday until Saturday, when the bone was found to be broken. Pictures of him dressed in his "Wild West" outfit were sent to his brother in California.

Speed Fans Awaiting Race at Indianapolis

Leon Duray Leads 24 Drivers Who Have Qualified for 500-Mile Grind.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 28.—Thousands of motor racing fans began pouring into Indianapolis today for the nation's greatest speedway classic, the annual 500-mile international race, Wednesday.

Indications were that the Memorial Day race would be the fastest ever seen here. The list of qualifiers stood at 24 today, but drivers will have until tomorrow afternoon to finish the trials.

Leon Duray, who will have the pole position in the race, made the fastest qualifying time on record when he sent his Miller special around the brick bowl in a 10-mile test an an average speed of 122.3 miles an hour. One one lap he made 124 miles an hour.

Sisler and Hornsby Together at Boston

Boston, Mass., May 28.—Two baseball players, who once shared a city's interest as heroes of their respective clubs, today were united under the same ownership through acquisition of George Sisler by the Boston Braves.

Several years ago George Sisler was at his peak with the St. Louis Browns. He batted more than .400. His fielding was flashy. Every Brown fan cheered him.

But St. Louis hero worship was divided, for Rogers Hornsby was a member of the Cardinals, and rated as one of the game's greatest second basemen.

There was much partisanship among the fans for the two stars.

Now Hornsby, by a series of unique trades, is manager of the Braves and as such had the club's owner, Judge Emil Fuchs, obtain Sisler from the Washington Senators at the waiver price of $7,500. Hornsby thinks Sisler still has plenty of baseball left, just as does Sisler himself.
